

The MidSouth Regional Family Development Credential (FDC) Program Publications Order Form

The Family Development Credential (FDC) program has taught thousands of family workers effective ways to help families set and reach their own goals for healthy self-reliance. This comprehensive, strengths-based curriculum is built on two decades of university research.

Empowerment Skills for Family Workers is used by FDC Facilitators in many states to assist workers in earning the Family Development Credential.

To learn how to implement local FDC program, contact Deborah Smith at the University of Missouri-Kansas City by phone (816) 235-2529 or by email: smithde@umkc.edu

Praise for Empowerment Skills for Family Workers:

“...[I] just listen a little bit closer to what [families are] saying.”

“..[the family support approach] empowers them. It makes them do things for themselves...I used to do a lot of things for the families, and not really even thought about it. But after this class, (I realized) I’m not teaching them anything. When they leave there they’re not going to be able to do things for themselves. This way I can actually watch them do things for themselves and be there if they need me.”

“I stopped putting the desk in front of me and...I opened up my office. I feel more comfortable and I think [the families] do too.”

Publications available:

- Empowerment Skills for Family Workers – the worker handbook; required reading for all FDC participants; includes questions about activities to extend learning.
